The Rev. Mr. Burlington, head of the Chinese Embassy in Europe, and for some time past a resident in England, has been at Paris on a visit. Mr. Burlington, who is a remarkable man, is highly esteemed by his countrymen, and is considered as one of the ablest and most accomplished diplomatists of his day. His mission in Paris is to represent the interests of China, and to obtain for her as much as possible of the advantages which might be derived from a commercial treaty with England. Mr. Burlington, who is a very intelligent man, and is well versed in the affairs of Europe, is also a great financier, and is able to handle the finances of the Chinese government with great ability. He is also a great orator, and is able to express his views with great eloquence. The Chinese government is very pleased with Mr. Burlington's services, and is highly satisfied with the manner in which he has conducted his mission. He is a great friend of the Chinese people, and is always ready to do his best for them. The Chinese people are very much attached to Mr. Burlington, and his mission is a great source of pride to them. His mission is a great success, and the Chinese government is very pleased with the results which have been obtained. Mr. Burlington is a great man, and is highly respected by all who know him. He is a great friend of the Chinese people, and his mission is a great source of pride to them. The Chinese government is very pleased with the results which have been obtained. Mr. Burlington is a great man, and is highly respected by all who know him. He is a great friend of the Chinese people, and his mission is a great source of pride to them.