Musical history is unique to Myrtle Beach’s Charlie’s Place

The famous nightclub itself is gone, but the Fitzgeralds’ home and part of a small motel they operated still exist. Phase One of the preservation project included reconstruction of the house as a community center and event space. Phase Two includes restoration of the first four motel units and reconstruction of eight other units. A few rooms will be kept as a museum to the era, showing what “Green Book” travel was like. Other rooms will be reconstructed for use as small shops and community classes or crafts. In addition to saving the musical history and culture of Charlie’s Place, the city’s goal is to restore the economic contributions that the club and motel made to the Booker T. Washington neighborhood.

Textured crossing in place

A new textured crosswalk at Meyers Avenue and Yorkshire Parkway at The Market Common alerts drivers to expect pedestrian traffic. Neighbors requested additional measures for bikers and walkers crossing here.

Myrtle Beach honored for 31st year of financial excellence

For the 31st consecutive year, Myrtle Beach has received the Certificate of Achievement for Excellence in Financial Reporting from the Government Finance Officers Association.

“The Certificate of Achievement is the highest form of recognition in the area of governmental accounting and financial reporting, and the attainment represents a significant accomplishment by a government and its management,” according to the GFOA.

Each year, a public accounting firm audits the city’s books according to standards established by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Governmental Accounting Standards Board.

The auditors consistently have said that Myrtle Beach’s financial statements represent the city’s financial condition in a manner that is fair in all material respects, known as an “unqualified opinion.”

Annual Report: Fiscal Year 2018-19

Preserving the history and culture of Charlie’s Place

Myrtle Beach’s unique musical history is part of the story being told through the restoration and re-use of Charlie’s Place on Carver Street. Charlie Fitzgerald and his wife, Sarah, owned the Myrtle Beach nightspot from the late 1930s to the early 1960s.

The Shag and “beach music” all have their origins here. Famous African-Americans entertained at Charlie’s Place in the days before integration, and many stayed at the Fitzgeralds’ hotel, which was next door.

Charlie’s Place catered to entertainers excluded from other venues, including Dizzy Gillespie, Little Richard, Billie Holliday, Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, Lena Horne, Count Basie, Muddy Water and Ray Charles.

Arts & Innovation District begins to come alive

A transformation is underway in downtown Myrtle Beach, now that City Council has approved a master plan for the area and zoning for the Arts & Innovation District.

The city’s Technology Advisory Group is starting a co-work and event space on Ninth Avenue North. At least one business has announced plans to restore a historic building on Nance Plaza.

Hiring 10 more police officers and redeveloping the downtown area were two of the top priorities in the fiscal year which ended June 30. The spending plan for fiscal year 2018-19 totaled $199.7 million and added 10 new police officers for a second consecutive year.

Last year’s budget featured a three-mill tax increase to pay for the 10 additional officers. As expected, the investment in police personnel and technology has resulted in lower crime rates. Both 2018 and early 2019 saw reductions. Owner-occupied homes continued to receive a credit from the Tourism Development Fee for the operational portion of the budget. Thanks to the TDF, the effective tax rate for owner-occupied homes was just 16 mills.

Water and sewer rates increased slightly during the year, mainly as a pass-through of higher wholesale costs from Grand Strand Water and Sewer Authority. For a typical family using 7,500 gallons of water a month, the 3.9 percent increase resulted in an extra $1.89 per month.

Funding for police and a new police station was added in each of the FY 2018-19 and 2019-20 budgets. Above, a real-time crime analyst watches the city’s 800-plus surveillance cameras. New technology and great teamwork helped the violent crime rate drop another 14 percent in the first half of 2019, continuing the 2018 trend.

Public safety is the city’s top priority, with 10 police officers added in each of the FY 2018-19 and 2019-20 budgets.

What do you get for your money as a resident?

When all regular property taxes, fees and monthly service charges were considered, a typical residential household in the City of Myrtle Beach paid an estimated $135 per month for city services in 2018-19. Included are property taxes on a house valued at $250,000 and two automobiles valued at $28,000, along with monthly fees for 7,500 gallons of water, curbside solid waste services and the stormwater fee.

Note that the cost per month of all city services combined is about the same or less than a typical electric power bill or the cost of telephone, cable and internet service for most homes. And that’s before calculating the 80-percent TDF property tax credit for owner-occupied residential property.

So, what does that $135 per month buy? Here’s a short list of what you get for your money.

- ISO 1 fire protection; 24-hour EMS response; hazardous material response; 24-hour police protection; traffic enforcement; criminal investigation; crime prevention programs; school resource officers; street construction and maintenance; traffic signals and street lights; street sweeping; litter pick-up; recycling; stormwater drainage system maintenance and improvement; parks; playgrounds; recreation facilities and programs; community planning, zoning and development review; code enforcement and construction services; municipal court; various economic development services; street tree plantings and maintenance; and all municipal management, support and legislative services.

FY 2018-19 budget supports city progress

The only other utility increase was an extra 50 cents a month per equivalential residential unit (ERU) in the stormwater utility fee. One ERU is 5,000 square feet of driveway, parking area or roof surface. Residential properties are assessed at one ERU. Commercial properties pay a stormwater fee that’s based on the actual amount of impervious surface on site.

The FY 2018-19 budget also featured $12.4 million in new capital improvement projects during the year, including restrooms at Savannah’s Playground and other renovations. For instance, Chapin Memorial Library received a new roof this summer as one of those projects.

Myrtle Beach has Council-Manager government form

By a four-to-one margin, Myrtle Beach city voters adopted the Council-Manager form of government in 1973. In this system, City Council is the legislative body, setting the policy and direction for municipal government.

City Council is composed of a mayor who serves as the presiding officer and six members. All are elected at-large to four-year terms in staggered, biennial elections. The mayor and Council are non-partisan.

A professional city manager is the chief executive and administrative officer for the city. The manager is appointed by City Council and administers daily operations through the executive staff and department heads.

The City of Myrtle Beach is both a public agency and a multi-million dollar corporation. The budget for fiscal year 2019-20 totals $202 million.

South Carolina requires that local governments adopt balanced budgets, providing sufficient revenues and other financing sources to offset expenditures authorized for the fiscal period. Myrtle Beach has such a balanced budget.

Downtown plan seeks culture, arts

The goal is to create a vibrant and thriving urban center that capitalizes on diversity. As conceived in the master plan, the Arts & Innovation District will include city offices, a new library, a new museum or two, a performing arts center, a co-work space for entrepreneurs and a new city square for events and activities.

The city has hired an architectural firm to craft a design vision for the area. Bringing entrepreneurs and artists to the area will create an inviting cultural atmosphere to attract new business and residential projects. Relocating public facilities within the district will generate additional foot traffic and potential customers to support new dining, retail, living and entertainment options.

Myrtle Beach, by the numbers
