Fee Waiver for Heat Pump Permits

The City has great news for residents who need to replace water or space heaters! The Building Division will waive the permit fees for the installation of electric heat pumps until June 30, 2023. This waiver applies to the replacement of an existing natural gas water heater or furnace (with or without AC), with an electric heat pump. Certain State fees will still apply, typically less than $10.

Take advantage of this offer to save on your permit fees for a new heat pump. Heat pumps are an energy-efficient alternative to gas furnaces and water heaters. They use electricity to heat water, or to heat or cool air. Electric heat pumps can also be used as air conditioners.

Electric heat pumps use electricity instead of burning methane gas to generate heat. Space and water heating generally account for most of a home's carbon emissions. Switching to an electric heat pump is clean and energy efficient, and will not require carbon emissions, if you are enrolled in ECO-100 rate plan from Peninsula Clean Energy.

Winners of the Storm Drain Art Contest

Congrats to the Storm Drain Art Contest Winners

You may have noticed some new artwork on sidewalks around town, courtesy of the City's Storm Drain Murals Pilot Project. The artwork represents the winning designs from a contest the City hosted several months ago.

Storm drains are the gates to local creeks and the San Francisco Bay. Since these drains often go unnoticed, the City wanted to bring attention to the storm drains and the importance of keeping streets and waterways clean. There are 14 murals installed across town. Find them all by visiting the locations specified in this map.

Help the City improve stormwater programs by taking a stormwater survey here. A huge thank you to everyone who entered the art contest!

Building Division Closed August 26 & 29

The Building Division is in the process of upgrading its permit tracking system with a new, state-of-the-art system. To implement the upgrade, the current system will need to go offline on Friday, August 26. The new system will then be brought online starting August 26, but will not be operational while it is configured. As the permit tracking system is central to the function of the Building Division, the Building Division will be closed Friday, August 26 and Monday, August 29 while the new system is brought online. If you have business with the Building Division, the City suggests that you visit prior to the end of the day on Thursday, August 25. The City regrets the inconvenience but anticipates that the new system will offer many new benefits that will be useful to the community.

Iku Nagai: Personal Mythology Now through October 30th - Peninsula Museum of Art

A series paying homage to Chōjū-giga style animal caricatures is a focus of the exhibition created by the late Japanese-American and Bay Area artist, Ikuku (Iku) Nagai. Her stylized drawings, chiefly of rabbits and frogs acting as humans, tell both humorous and serious stories of heroes, villains, and those in between. The original scrolls or Chōjū-giga, short for Chōjū-jinbutsu-giga (literally "Caricatures of Animals and Humans") were created by the artist-monk known as Toba Sojo and belong to Kōzan-ji temple in Kyoto, Japan. They date from the mid-12th to mid-13th centuries and are a Japanese national treasure. The free and cheerful style of drawing evident in the scrolls is considered to be the origin of manga, modern comics, and animation.

Additional prints are from Nagai's Anecdote Series, speaking to social and psychological issues and inspiring belief in the power and continuity of nature. The artist uses animals, birds, and mountains to convey messages of social upheaval and hope, overlaying them with rainbow-colored concentric circles and other ancient symbols.

Although most of the artwork in this show are prints, nearly all are unique, not created in editions. The drawings have the appearance of pen-and-ink, but they are actually drawn with very fine brushes.

Nagai also experimented with her own style of European cubism, seen in two paintings in this show.

The artist used multiple techniques to produce her art: gold and silver leaf, watercolor, etching, drawing, monotype, woodblock, monoprint, chine colle, and painting in mineral pigments she ground herself.

Iku Nagai was born in Kyoto, Japan, and trained in traditional Japanese painting. She met her Japanese-American husband Masaaki in Japan. They married and then moved to the United States, settling in San Mateo in 1975. Here in the Bay Area, Nagai was exposed to European and American modern art, earning both her BFA and MFA at San Jose State.

In her work, Nagai creates a synthesis of historic Japanese aesthetics and contemporary genres. A 1999 retrospective exhibition at the Triton Museum celebrated her life in art.
