WHY NOW?

According to the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation & Development (OECD), a global intergovernmental organization of 36 Countries with a mission to advance economic prosperity and world trade:

Digitalization changes how we live, work, [play], communicate, and move around.

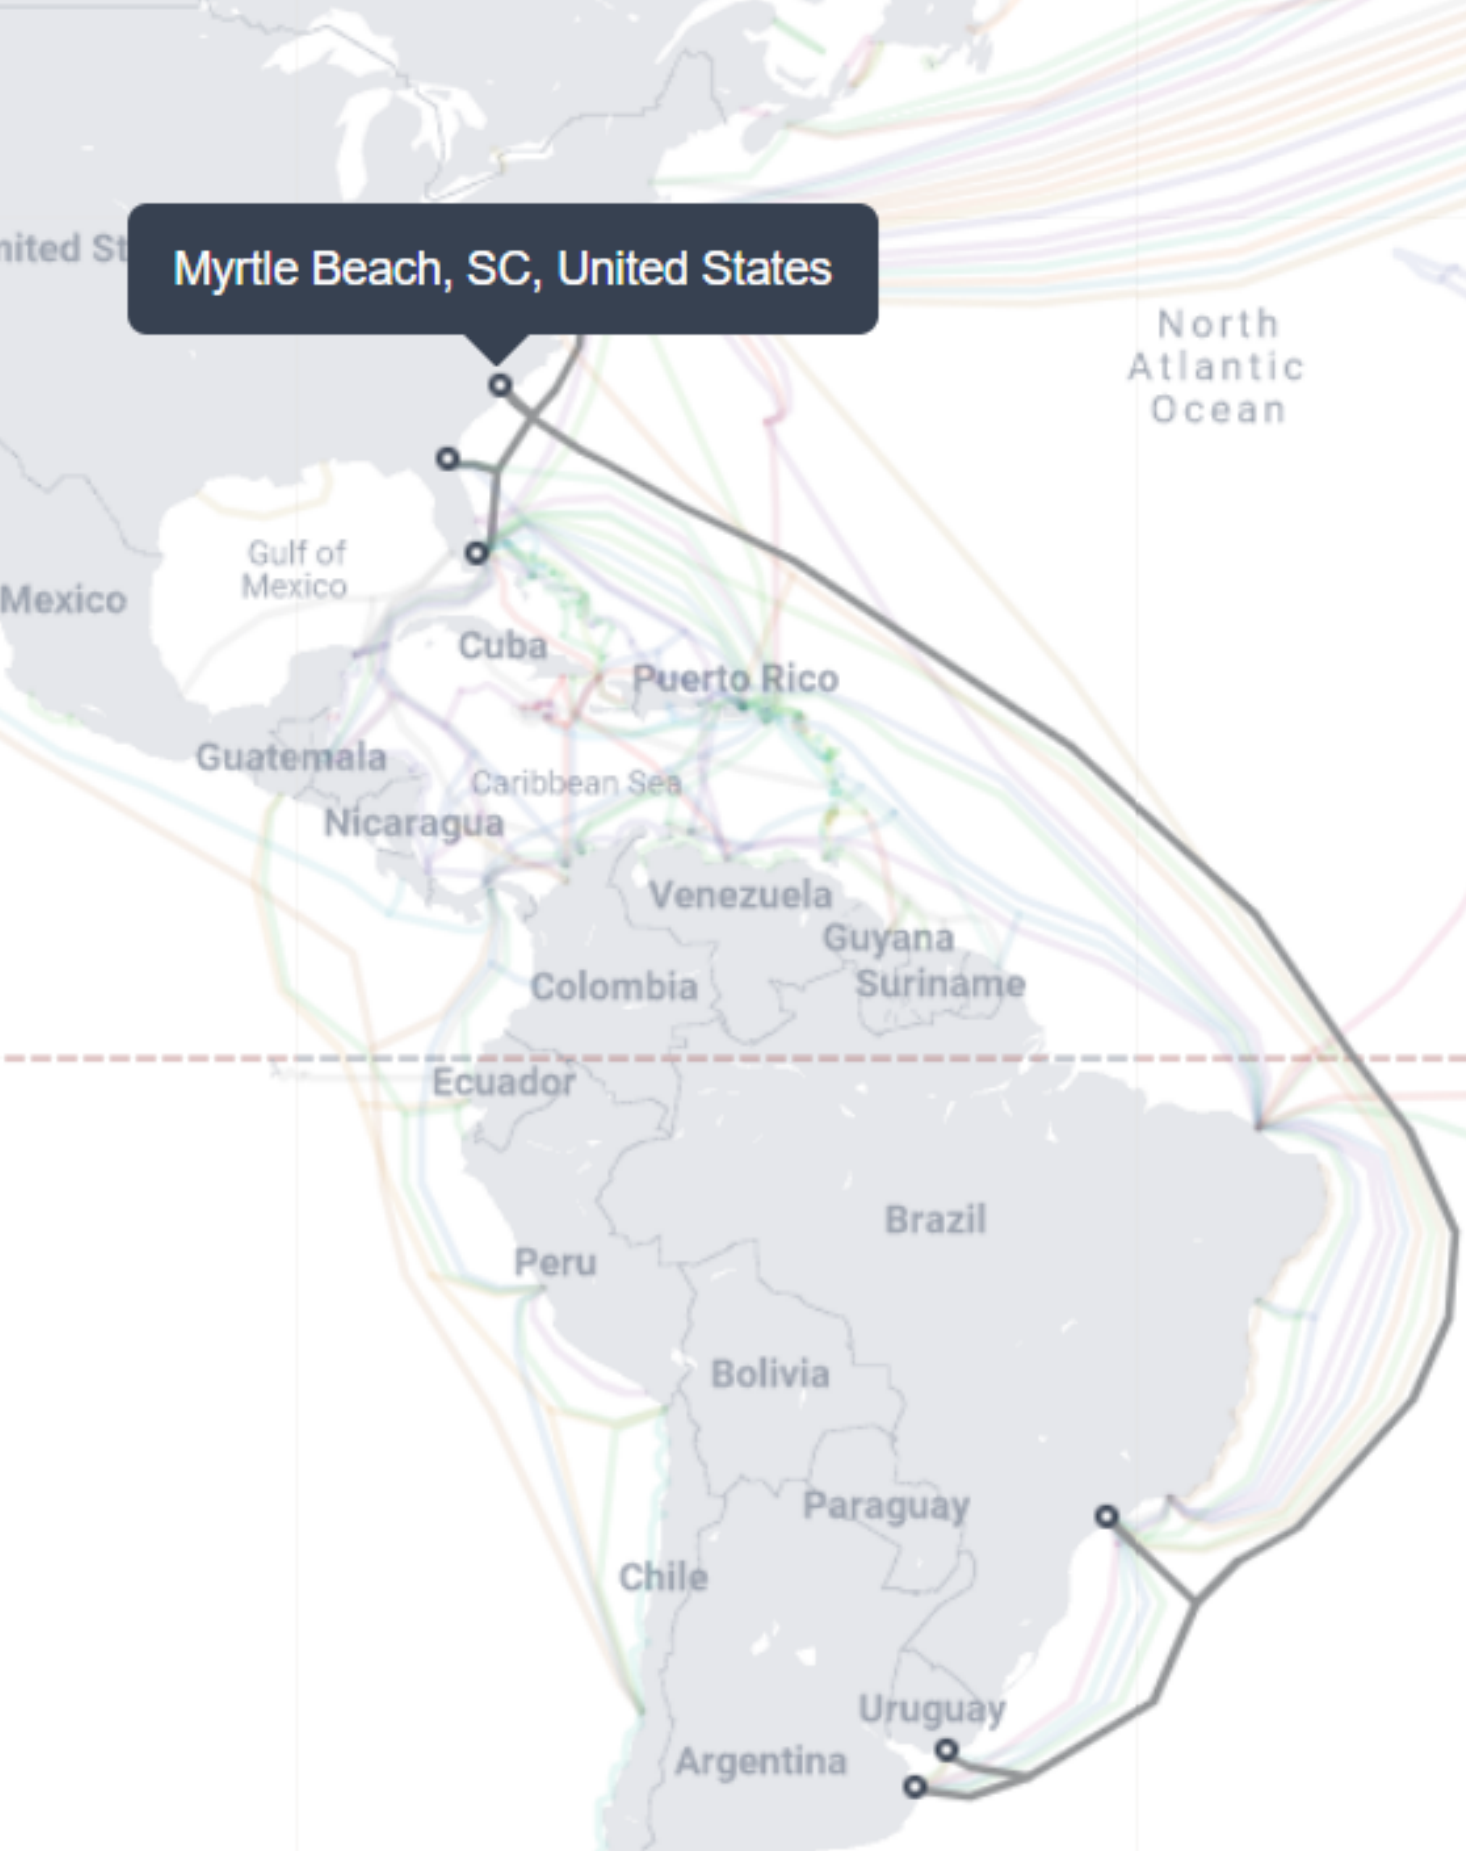

The 4th Industrial Revolution demands new coalitions between cities and the private sector to shape better policies and robust outcomes.

The global smart city market was estimated to grow from 312 Billion to 758 Billion between 2015 and 2020.
